Black Friday Survival Tips

You may be asking yourself: Why would I need to know Black Friday survival tips? If you have ever been to a Walmart on Black Friday night (I don't know why you would) you have seen for yourself the horrifying every-man-for-himself show of people. The following tips I have compiled are the top seven most useful ways to stay alive and still get that deal on Friday.

Let the record show that I'm not asking you to participate in Black Friday whatsoever, I'm just giving you the utensils to survive if you already plan to give into the sin of greed this year.

1. To get an edge over the other customers, you'll have to leave extra early. I recommend 12 p.m. Thanksgiving day. I know you will be missing out on Thanksgiving dinner, but it's worth it as you will also be missing family reunion with Aunt Sally. That's a fair trade if you ask me.
2. Bring your customized shopping cart with shovel and pepper spray attachments to deter feral soccer moms holding the newest Nintendo™ console. Contrary to popular belief, the pepper spray is for your own eyes when you catch a glimpse of these rare breeds. Anything is allowed in the name of self-defense.

3. Toasters.
4. Bring a buddy to leave behind when the mob catches up. The only criteria for the buddy is that he/she/they must be slower than you. Hint: a full Thanksgiving meal in the stomach usually slows individuals to half of their normal running speed.
5. Tell the 15-year-old boy working his first shift at Target, "Don't  tell me what I don't  know you son of a  I hope you know I ***** ***** ***** *****!""
6. Don't worry about the 10k you will spend, because at least you will have the world's largest compendium of CURVED ULTRA 4K t.v. sets.
7. Realize you probably shouldn't go Black Friday shopping and stay home to actually enjoy Thanksgiving dinner with your family and friend. Or not.

Avoid bothersome November beards in three easy steps

Raise your hand (or foot if a hand is not available). Now feel your face. Is it rough? Do you feel a thick mane of hair? If the answer is yes, then congratulations, you have (maybe) decided to support cancer awareness by participating in No-Shave November.

While No-Shave November certainly is a worthy cause, it can create problems for some. Many employers will not hire someone if they have lackluster facial hair. So unless you can grow a Matt Guthrie-esque beard fast, you're going to have to hide that scruff.

There are many strategies to hide your facial hair, however there is only one truly effective strategy to hiding your face.

Currently the trademark has not been filed and it is not pending. I call it the Clay-on-Face™. The seemingly-simple process is actually very complex and took weeks if not months of research to finalize.

Step 1.

Find Clay. This may be the most challenging part of this process. Whether you find it naturally or go out and buy it, you must have clay to ensure a successful mask.

Step 2.

Prepare Clay. This is the most controversial step. Every person you meet will have a different way to prepare their clay. The best way to do it, in my opinion, is hold it like it's your last night on this earth. Then, I like to cut the clay into the shape of the face that I will be applying it to.

Step 3.

Apply Clay. I then grab the clay and push it into the face. It's good to be gentle, but also to show your dominance in the situation.

The Clay-on-Face™ is an all-around product. Whether you have a job interview, a family Thanksgiving dinner, a bar mitzvah, a prom or a Migos concert, the Clay-on-Face™ has you covered.

Ultimate Thanksgiving playlist to set the mood for food

After spending hours scouring the internet finding the best of the best thanksgiving tunes, I believe to have found the ultimate Thanksgiving playlist. Enjoy!

Thanksgiving Theme by Vince Guaraldi Trio. A classic thanksgiving song from the Peanuts to start off. This catchy tune is popular with the kids and singing along is hard to resist.

I GOT GREEN BEANS, POTATOES, TOMATOES by Various Artists. Watching the various funny compilations of this song is popular among teenagers and this musical masterpiece is bound to get your 12 year-old son off of his Xbox and into the kitchen.

A Turkey Named Bert by The Learning Station. This track will take you back to elementary school music class and teaching this to the kids will ensure they will sing it for years to come.

All That Meat And No Potatoes by Louis Armstrong. A classic Thanksgiving song that sets the mood before the feast. The captivating voice of Armstrong is bound to set a relaxing mood before the feast.

Sweet Potato Pie by Ray Charles and James Taylor. This tune by Ray Charles and James Taylor is a nice jazzy song that is bound to make any meal at least three times better.

What a Wonderful World by Louis

Armstrong. Another song by Armstrong made the list and this tune makes people realize how wonderful life is and how truly fortunate we all are.

The Long Way Home by Norah Jones. A relaxing song that is great to listen to after your belly is full with turkey and stuffing. Good for kicking it back with the fam.

Thanksgiving Song by Adam Sandler. A hilarious track by one of the greatest actors in America, Adam Sandler. Sandler's talents not only include making fantastic films but also his song, Thanksgiving Song is a lyrical masterpiece.

Dear Mama by Tupac. The legendary Tupac delivers on a great thanksgiving hip hop song. This song is about being thankful for his mom and has some good messages.

Thankful by Kelly Clarkson. Another great Thanksgiving jam that resonates well with giving and being thankful for what we have.
